Digital

We help you develop programs that reach your target audience—whether it’s a branding campaign, product launch, or thought-leadership distribution. We have a unique approach to developing the right solutions for you.
Our redesigned site provides a simpler, streamlined experience for individual investors and advisors. All of the updates are focused on delivering the best of Morningstar to our users.

Improved Content Curation
Morningstar.com is designed to support the investing tasks that we are distinctly positioned to serve: evaluating and discovering new investments, building/upgrading a portfolio, and monitoring investments and the markets. The independent analysis and data investors rely on is organized in a more relevant and useful way.

Site Functionality
- Faster load times across the site for increased viewability and better performance. Average viewability rates on Morningstar.com are 36% better than industry averages.
- Morningstar.com is responsive so your message reaches across all devices—desktops, tablets, and mobile phones.
- New large-format home-page video player, also available for sponsorship.

New Advertising Opportunities
Today Page: Our home page for Morningstar.com provides a powerful buyout experience. With three leaderboards, home-page video center, and half page and rectangle options, your message will be more visible. Editorial events will be better surfaced for monthly sponsorship opportunities.

Data Reports: More key data and research appears above the fold, making it easier for investors and advisors to find what they need. All content has been organized in a way that users can find what they are looking for with one click. As part of this enhanced design, we have also added horizontal content modules on the data report pages. These new content modules fit into the workflow of the page for a more integrated feel.

Investors and advisors dedicate much of their research time to our data report pages. Sponsoring your own report pages helps you reach prospects when they are much closer to making an investment decision.

For greater impact, a leaderboard, rectangle, or half page unit can be added to the program. This is a popular tactic for high-exposure branding initiatives.

These data pages also provide areas for content distribution, allowing the advertiser to share thought leadership, white papers, and fund manager commentary specific to each ticker.
At Morningstar, we have several multifaceted, advisor-focused sponsorship opportunities. These programs offer thought leadership and content distribution to our select audience.

The advisor portal on Morningstar.com provides advisors with seamless access to practice management content, in-depth investment commentary, and other advisor-focused resources critical to their daily workflow. This page is just one of our advisor sponsorship opportunities available in 2019.

2019 Advisor Sponsorship Opportunities Available:
- Advisor Portal Page Sponsorship
- Collateral distribution program
- Portfolio watchlist sponsorship
- Quarter-end review package

How Advisors Can Help Independents and Accumulators Succeed

Michael Tipton - 4 May 2012

This is the fourth article in a series focusing on behavioral investor types and intended to help advisors strengthen their relationships with their clients by helping them better understand their financial personalities. Once advisors understand the various investor types at play, they can adjust their advisory approach for each type.

I recently introduced four behavioral investor types. Today we’ll take a deeper dive into independents and accumulators, reviewing the "aspiral" and "downset" of working with these two specific investor types and providing suggestions about how to advise these types of clients.

Independents: Updo
- Independents are conceptual, strongly willful thinkers who aren’t afraid to speak their minds and tell you their views on their portfolios.
- Independents tend to do their own research and often come to client meetings with good ideas. Ideas their advisors may not have considered.
- Given their willingness to do research, Independents may be contrary investors, which can be at a disadvantage in a rally.

Accumulators: Downset
- Accumulators are cautious, steady investors who do not want to take unnecessary risks or sell at market tops.
- Accumulators hold on to their investments, looking for the bottom to turn before selling.
- In this psychological state, Accumulators can be difficult to advise, as they may not want to sell even when it’s in their best interest.

Natalie Chance: A Good Tax Idea

The idea of a "docubox" is a good tax idea for investors who are looking to increase their charitable giving.

A Checklist for Developing a NextGen Offering

Here are three tips for developing a NextGen offering for your firm:
- Conduct a needs assessment
- Create a multi-channel strategy
- Ensure the offering is scalable.
Collateral Distribution Program
Let Morningstar.com serve as an extension of your sales team. Advisors use Morningstar.com to conduct pre-purchase research and analysis before recommending investments to their clients.

− Put your sales materials directly into the hands of advisors as they conduct fund-related research
− Give interested advisors seamless access to your sales managers as they’re making fund selections
− Includes static and dynamic links that update with ticker

In addition to the resource center, we’ll also provide an advisor-targeted link on each of your tickers to direct advisors back to your site.

*Program requires a 12-month, non-cancellable commitment, and is only available to asset managers directly (the program cannot be purchased through advertising agencies).
Portfolio Watchlist Sponsorship

Reach advisors or investors as they monitor specific holdings in their portfolio. The watchlist sponsorship allows advertisers to present a selection of their investment picks in our Portfolio Manager tool. The content module serves as a microsite where advertisers can provide thought leadership and additional education materials.

This sponsorship will include:
- Portfolio Manager sponsor unit
- Feature page with client sponsored watchlist of Morningstar data reports embedded in portfolio tool
- Feature Page Horizontal Content Module (100% of client content)
- Feature page ad units, including 728 x 90’s and 300 x 600 (100% of client content)
Advisor-Focused Opportunities

Advisor Talking Points

An educational thought leadership series with topics curated by Morningstar’s personal finance director, Christine Benz. Each month, Benz and Morningstar’s editorial team publish a collection of articles for advisors. Topics revolve around investment trends that advisors can address with their clients.

The articles and video commentary are then summarized in an email sent to advisors to help them start the conversation with their clients.

The monthly series will include:

→ Email sent to Morningstar’s advisor audience summarizing the topic with links to editorial and video commentary on Morningstar.com
→ Talking-points PDF for advisors to use in their practice — also available for download on Morningstar.com

Sponsor opportunities:

→ 300 x 250 ad unit with possible content module in the monthly email
→ Five- to six-page PDF with logo and full-page ad for sponsor
→ Digital presence on all talking-point content on Morningstar.com
→ Digital presence in articles by Christine Benz on Morningstar.com
Make Morningstar your communication medium. Use our content distribution modules to distribute your own content on Morningstar.com

Content Distribution Module
Deliver your content to Morningstar.com users consistently. Our content distribution modules integrate the tools and materials you provide into the workflow of investors and advisors. Our readers come to Morningstar.com for our independent perspective and unique content. Let them come to expect the same quality perspectives, commentary, and thought leadership from you.

Options:
- Data Reports: new horizontal content module in data reports
- Articles
- As part of a center sponsorship
- As part of a fund report sponsorship
- Newsletters
- Research centers—button and text links
Our redesigned Today page features current news and our latest analysis delivered with our upgraded leaderboard and rectangle units. The page introduces a number of new features, including a dominant video player that rotates new commentary daily, and clickable headings to our Best Investments, My Portfolio, and Markets areas.
Content sponsorships align your brand or product with Morningstar’s editorial events and investment centers.

Center Sponsorship
Firms can be the exclusive sponsor of an entire investment center on Morningstar.com. It’s a great way to gain exposure in the most popular areas, while advertising investment-related product offerings or advice. This opportunity includes a content distribution module and 100% SOV in each investment center.

Available centers include:
Exchange-Traded Funds, Bonds, Personal Finance, Best Investments Center, and Advisor Portal

Special Report Weeks
Our site editors produce content that addresses timely topics such as retirement, tax planning, and college savings. This is an opportunity to align your brand directly with a particular topic or audience. Receive exclusive, 100% SOV sponsorship of a week long editorial event featured on Morningstar.com’s home page, articles, and video pages.

Post-MIC Digital Sponsorship
This package gives advisors who were unable to attend the Morningstar Investment Conference, or those who attended but who missed certain breakout sessions/speakers, access to video replays of the conference’s most popular sessions. The program runs for six weeks and includes an opt-in lead component.

See our 2019 editorial calendar for more information.

An Excellent Pure-Play Inflation Hedge

Unlike other funds in its Morningstar Category, Vanguard Inflation-Protected Securities provides pure exposure to inflation-helping TIPS at a rock-bottom cost.

Vanguard Inflation-Protected Securities is an excellent choice for investors looking for a pure-play inflation hedge. The fund’s rock-bottom fees provide it with a lower performance hurdle than many peers and contribute to attractive longer-term performance. This, when combined with benefits from Vanguard’s strong stewardship, earns the fund a Morningstar Analyst Rating of Gold.

In composition, the fund closely resembles its benchmark, the Bloomberg Barclays U.S. Treasury Inflation Protected Index. However, the team has the ability to add or remove risk relative to the benchmark (typically modest divergences) when it has high conviction about a particular trade, so it is not a true index fund. The team often looks to generate excess return through relative value positioning between bonds and will sell in or out of off-the-run securities when the price is attractive.

Unlike many funds in the inflation-protected bond Morningstar Category, this one does not court additional risk by looking for extra sources of return in commodities, high-yield bonds, or other assets. The fund is meant to act as a diversifier to nominal treasuries and provide exposure to inflation-protected securities.

Coal and oil are the highest carbon emitters. Natural gas is the marginal generation source, which emits carbon dioxide. However, U.S. utilities still trail their European counterparts, such as Spain’s IBE:ES, Italy’s Enel, and Ireland’s Electric Ireland, in terms of carbon intensity. Utilities generate power with a wide range of sources. How they do it directly affects their carbon profiles. Nuclear and renewable energy have a lower carbon-intensity profile than coal and oil but is still well above natural gas emissions, helping meet environmental policy goals. But we think utilities with superior carbon-intensity profiles are best prepared to adapt to rising investor expectations for carbon reductions. The market underestimates the nuclear power industry’s ability to achieve these reductions. Utilities are responding to long-term regulations, which we believe is a given in the United States in the long run. We think utilities can achieve at least a 31% reduction in carbon emissions by 2025, even after considering the Trump withdrawal from the Paris Agreement. Most of this reduction comes through new-build capacity offset planned and possible retirements. Nuclear and renewable energy will grow slightly as uprates and coal plants withdraw from the grid. The cost of building new power plants in the United States is 32% lower than it was in 2005. The U.S. could add as much as 840 million metric tons of carbon dioxide equivalent emissions this year. The most challenging problem is that of waste management. Waste management is a crucial concern for most power generators, but it is particularly important for nuclear operators because of the long-term health and environmental impacts of operating licenses. By 2016, most nuclear power plants had made notable reductions. With new-build capacity offsetting a steep drop in nuclear sites, the U.S. electric sector has achieved the bulk of these reductions by tilting fuel mix to renewable energy. We look at the list of the largest U.S. utilities within the Morningstar database and find that those with the lowest carbon intensity are best prepared to meet long-term carbon-reduction targets. In this article, we will focus on the third point: Environmental. We find that utilities with superior carbon-intensity profiles are best prepared to meet long-term carbon-reduction targets.

Utilities with the best carbon profiles have made notable reductions in carbon emissions. We have created a list of the largest U.S. utilities within the Morningstar database and found that those with the lowest carbon intensity are best prepared to meet long-term carbon-reduction targets. In this article, we will focus on the third point: Environmental. We find that utilities with superior carbon-intensity profiles are best prepared to meet long-term carbon-reduction targets.

Trends in Financial Planning
In a study, we find that the value of financial advice depends significantly on how it’s given and that households that work with a financial planner make better financial decisions than those who use “transactional” advisors. In addition, we’ll find that advisors and investors are considering nonfinancial assets such as human capital and real estate when building portfolios, leading to better outcomes for investors. Finally, we’ll uncover investment biases advisors exhibit and analyze how they affect clients.

Know What You Buy: Investment Transparency
Conflicts of interest are built into many investment products and advice. Expanding our work shining a light on load-sharing arrangements, we uncover other conflicts that adversely affect outcomes for investors. We will also explore how the industry can modernize fund data to make it more timely, accurate, and accessible to investors. Finally, we’ll expose Morningstar’s own efforts to improve the Morningstar Analyst Rating.

Who Are Investors?
In this issue, we roll out research on investors— who they are, what their goals are, and how advisors and asset managers that serve them can make the most impact in helping them reach those goals. Articles will include new research on happiness and money, on life events that make investors succeed or fail, and a profile of investor interest in ESG.

The Carbon Economy
To help meet climate change goals, countries are increasingly turning to renewable energy sources to meet the demand for energy. In this issue, we look at the outlook for oil demand in a low-carbon economy. We’ll also analyze demand forecasts for electric and autonomous vehicles and other sustainable technology and their economic impacts.
Morningstar Medalists: The Complete U.S. List

Morningstar Analyst Ratings are a testament to the skill and insight of Morningstar’s analysts. These funds typically have stellar long-term performance, reasonable fees, and solid management teams. Morningstar awards Gold, Silver, and Bronze medals to funds that have distinguished themselves across all of the five pillars. These funds are considered best of breed. They have high fees, or have a record that trails higher-rated peers’. Nevertheless, these funds have sufficient strengths that the analysts believe they can outperform a relevant benchmark. The ratings are a complement to the Morningstar Research Services. Morningstar analysts believe in the five pillars of performance, or shortcomings at the parent firm. The Morningstar Analyst Rating rest on five pillars: the caliber of management, past performance, or shortcomings at the parent firm. The rating has since been extended to ETFs and mutual funds.

The Morningstar Analyst Rating for Funds was launched in the U.S. in 2011 as a complement to the Morningstar Rating (often referred to as the “star rating”). The rating has since been extended to ETFs and mutual funds.

Morningstar Medalists is Morningstar’s annual recognition of fund managers who have performed outstandingly well. Morningstar’s Medalist Funds are recognized for their high Morningstar Rating (often referred to as the “star rating”). The rating has since been extended to ETFs and mutual funds.

Morningstar prides itself on providing an independent voice to help investors make better-informed decisions. In turn, we seek advertisers that share our customer-centric philosophy.

Our mission to put investors first encompasses all our data, analysis, articles, marketing, promotions, and advertising. To ensure that products and services advertised are relevant, lawful, and credible, we reserve the right to refuse advertising that we believe is not factually accurate or in good taste, employs a sensationalist tone or approach, promotes products or services that are not a good fit for the Morningstar audience, or comes from a business that can’t be identified or verified as legitimate.

These guidelines are to assist our advertisers in creating copy for display advertising, dedicated emails, and other promotional campaigns that will reach Morningstar’s audience on site ads, via email, in rich media, or in our print publications. (Note: Dedicated email campaigns may be subject to an extended approval process.)

Morningstar will likely reject ads making bold claims about unknowable future performance or otherwise promising “get rich quick” or “no-risk” investment strategies. This includes ads that tout highly speculative or illiquid investments (e.g., penny stocks) or promise unusually high investment returns.

Advertisers should avoid language considered sensational, promissory, or strident, such as:
- Explosive
- Juiciest
- Soaring
- Fast cash
- Spectacular
- Cash-spinning
- Fortune-building
- Meaty
- Huge
- Can’t go wrong
- Risk-free

We also do not accept advertising from investment firms that are unregulated by the SEC, from investment sites lacking explanations about the risks involved with their investment approach, or from investment sites whose legitimacy cannot be verified. Based on FINRA guidelines for member firms, we consider the following factors:

FINRA Regulation is troubled by advertisements that are so aggressive and demeaning to competitors, and in such question-able taste, as to potentially undermine investor trust and confidence in the industry, as a whole. Such advertisements do not serve the interests of investors or the industry and we expect our members to take a more constructive and informative approach to their advertising.

FINRA typically wants advertisements to be fair and balanced. In terms of financials—what are the rewards and what are the risks of investing in a certain type of product or service?

We have a duty to manage investor expectations about the risks and rewards of investing. Advertisements that mislead or confuse investors about the risks and rewards of investing, or that attempt to incite a trading frenzy, harm the investing public, or undermine investor confidence in the integrity of the markets will not be accepted by Morningstar.

Advertisements will be considered on a case-by-case basis. We may accept one campaign while rejecting or requesting revisions on another campaign from the same advertiser. We may also accept some portions of a campaign while requesting revisions to other pieces of the same campaign.

Additional Guidelines:
- Morningstar has the right to refuse advertising that, in Morningstar’s opinion, is not factually accurate or in good taste.
- Morningstar will not permit at any time the placement of any advertising for illegal or objectionable products.
- Advertising must not contain or link to fraudulent, provocative, deceptive, or offensive material, including material that misrepresents, ridicules, or attacks an individual or group on the basis of age, color, national origin, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, or disability.
- No messages advertising gambling, alcohol, illegal narcotics, firearms, ammunition, fireworks, tobacco and materials, religion, politics, and products and adult services related to pornography will be allowed.

Morningstar.com inventory is sold site-direct only. Any Morningstar.com inventory represented via a programmatic or network exchange is fraud. Morningstar has the right to refuse any nefarious pixels attached to ad tags that may block impressions, collect data, or cause impression discrepancies larger than 10%.

Any creative that includes Morningstar IP, including but not limited to the Morningstar Rating, Morningstar Category averages and rankings, Morningstar Style Box, Morningstar qualitative analysis, or Sustainability ratings and rankings requires a Morningstar® Essentials™ license and is subject to Essentials usage guidelines and terms.
